Fund Manager Comments

The global economy has continued to be characterised by clear policy divergences in the first quarter of 2015, with further easing in the Euro area and Japan causing major currency devaluations in these regions. By contrast anticipation of higher interest rates in the US has caused the dollar to surge during the quarter, which is expected to keep inflation and growth more contained in the near term. A number of emerging economies have responded to declining inflation and growth expectations by easing of monetary conditions, as a restructuring of the Chinese economy continues to weigh on import demand and hence commodity prices. Although geopolitical uncertainties are perceived to be elevated, the decision by OPEC to maintain oil production at elevated levels is expected to drive global growth to 3.6% in 2015, through substantially lower oil prices and hence greater purchasing power amongst net oil importing economies.

Global equity markets have not moved much from the prior quarter, however the volatility has increased significantly. Emerging Market equities have continued to lag the Developed Market peers with overhangs such as the depressed oil price, devalued currencies, political and social risks. On the opposite side of the coin the economic prospects of the Developed Markets have improved and consequently attracted inflows. Emerging Market companies in aggregate have continued to gear up their balance sheets in contrast to Developed Market and with the inevitable turn in the rate cycle, demand for good quality counters with strong balance sheets are likely to accelerate. This bodes well for our portfolios as we have maintained our investment in high quality companies that have strong competitive advantages, and the ability to leverage off those competitive advantages to deliver a higher level of sustainable Return on Equity (ROE) through the economic cycle. We believe that companies which have healthy balance sheets and strong cash flows have the ability to sustain themselves during challenging economic environments while delivering real earnings growth over the long-term. Our portfolios trade at a significant discount to the global equity market across various measures and provide sustainably higher ROE through the economic cycle which will deliver real wealth creation for our clients over the long term.
