Fund Manager Comments

The past year has been defined most prominently by a sharp increase in nationalist and populist rhetoric in a number of developed countries. The US presidential election ultimately saw an emboldened Donald Trump emerge victorious in a blow to globalisation and international trade, while reinvigorating short term nominal GDP growth expectations in the world's largest economy. In the UK, citizens voted to leave the European Union, effectively rejecting the trade and immigration benefits which come with continental integration in favour of a more isolated and protectionist policy stance. Both these developments have the potential to impact global economy significantly, depending crucially on the scale and intensity of implementation by new leaders, while 2017 elections in Germany, France and the Netherlands may give us even further evidence of the structural shift in public sentiment that we have seen so far. In emerging markets (EM) we continue to see a number of structural changes, including those taking place in China, where the government is pursuing a host of supply-side reforms. In the past year however, China has stimulated its economy somewhat through fiscal and monetary measures, which has stabilised growth expectations for 2017. Furthermore, a number of EM economies, such as Russia and Brazil are emerging from deep recessions, which is likely to prop up global growth to some extent. Overall, we expect global GDP growth to improve moderately over the next year, with risks evenly balanced.

Global equity markets have had a relatively strong year driven by valuation re-rating despite a volatile economic and political environment. Most global equity markets are now trading either in line or at a premium to their long-term valuations. Through most of the year, continuation of Quantitative Easing (QE) from the European Central Bank and the Bank of Japan along with speculation of a more moderate hiking cycle in the US had been providing support to equity valuations. However, during 4Q16 investor focus shifted towards potential fiscal stimulus in the US and the consequent reinvigoration of short term nominal GDP growth which led to equity markets continuing to rally despite the increase in the US fed fund rate and the inching up of global bond yields.

While expectation of higher nominal economic growth in the US has continued to underpin equity market performance despite the reversal in bond yields, we believe investors need to be mindful that these expectations are currently speculative and there is still significant uncertainty regarding sustainability of any expansionary fiscal measures. Given a backdrop of increased economic uncertainty, rising funding costs through higher bond yields and equity market valuations at a premium to their long-term averages, we believe investors need to continue focusing on quality and value. During uncertain times, the market is likely to draw greater distinction between low and high quality companies which should play out very favourably for our portfolio positioning.

Our share selection criteria continues to focus on market leaders which have sustainable competitive advantages and the ability to deliver superior Return on Equity (ROE) through the economic cycle. The higher free cash flow yields and stronger balance sheets of the companies in our portfolio ensures that they are able to invest in their businesses through the cycle, while providing sustainable returns to shareholders through dividends and share repurchases. We believe these qualities will continue to provide long-term wealth creation for our investors while taking on relatively lower risk than the market.
