Fund Manager Comments

The global economy has continued to be characterised by clear policy divergences in the first quarter of 2015, with further easing in the Euro area and Japan causing major currency devaluations in these regions. By contrast anticipation of higher interest rates in the US has caused the dollar to surge during the quarter, which is expected to keep inflation and growth more contained in the near term. A number of emerging economies have responded to declining inflation and growth expectations by easing of monetary conditions, as a restructuring of the Chinese economy continues to weigh on import demand and hence commodity prices. Although geopolitical uncertainties are perceived to be elevated, the decision by OPEC to maintain oil production at elevated levels is expected to drive global growth to 3.6% in 2015, through substantially lower oil prices and hence greater purchasing power amongst net oil importing economies.

Global equity markets have not moved much from the prior quarter, however the volatility has increased significantly. Emerging Market equities have continued to lag the Developed Market peers with overhangs such as the depressed oil price, devalued currencies, political and social risks. On the opposite side of the coin the economic prospects of the Developed Markets have improved and consequently attracted inflows. Emerging Market companies in aggregate have continued to gear up their balance sheets in contrast to Developed Market and with the inevitable turn in the rate cycle, demand for good quality counters with strong balance sheets are likely to accelerate. This bodes well for our portfolios as we have maintained our investment in high quality companies that have strong competitive advantages, and the ability to leverage off those competitive advantages to deliver a higher level of sustainable Return on Equity (ROE) through the economic cycle. We believe that companies which have healthy balance sheets and strong cash flows have the ability to sustain themselves during challenging economic environments while delivering real earnings growth over the long-term.

There is positive net absorption (Demand > Supply) of space in the majority of the global property markets and the US is leading the Developed Markets in terms of converting this net absorption into higher occupancy and positive rental reversion. In the current environment, stock selection is becoming increasingly important and REITS with stronger rental growth, enhancing developments and superior balance sheets are well positioned to outperform as bond yields normalise over the medium term.

Based on the positive employment outlook for the US economy, the Federal Reserve is widely expected to begin hiking its key policy rate during the second half of 2015. However, by remaining sensitive to developments in macroeconomic conditions, including a rapid strengthening of the dollar, US policymakers have shown that they will be prudent in their actions, and will likely adapt to any unanticipated slowdown in the economy by pushing the tightening cycle further into the future. While developed market yields have been subdued in recent months by a lack of global inflationary pressure, they are widely expected to continue on a medium term upward trend as monetary policy normalises.

Our balanced portfolio is well diversified across geographies, currencies, asset classes, sectors and instruments. This appropriate level of diversification allows for a relatively lower level of risk and is positioned to generate real returns for our clients over the long term.
