Fund Manager Comments

The key feature of the 2017 economic landscape was the emergence of a synchronized global recovery driven by improving trade volume as well as commodity prices. Against the backdrop of still-absent inflationary pressures, key central banks, like the Federal Reserve, were able to credibly signal a strategy of a gradual withdrawal of record monetary stimulus which prevented a rapid rise in interest rates. On the back of the improved momentum this year, the IMF expects global economic growth to rise to 3.6% in 2017 after 3.2% in 2016, and firm further to 3.7% in 2018. In the United States, an improving job market has supported growth in disposable income and helped underpin consumer spending. Tax reform plans recently tabled by the Republican Party have played an important role in underpinning the ongoing bull-run in equity markets. Whilst the hope is that by cutting corporate tax and moving toward a territorial based system, investment and employment activity in the US would be boosted, as things stand the plans are unfunded and will over the long-term add to the fiscal deficit. Much of the Eurozone is now in a synchronised upswing following a double-dip recession in 2012 caused by the sovereign debt crisis. In Emerging Markets, both Brazil and Russia have emerged out of deep recessions. China has continued to defy bearish forecasts by maintaining a GDP growth rate close to 7.0% this year even while it structurally transitions to a more sustainable consumption-led growth path. The global economy faces a number of key risks. Most importantly, the normalisation of monetary policy in developed markets, in particular the US, may cause a faster than expected tightening of global financial conditions, which could impact market valuations and increase market volatility. China's high level of corporate indebtedness and lack of transparency on local government balance sheets also poses a key risk to the domestic economy and, by extension, the global economy.

Global benchmark yields have firmed over the past quarter amid continued evidence of economic recovery in the United States as well as the start of the Federal Reserve's balance sheet normalization process. Fixed income markets remain vulnerable to a disruptive tightening of monetary conditions, although muted inflation in Europe and the US implies central banks will likely withdraw monetary accommodation at a gradual pace. Emerging Markets and High Yield corporate issuers, which have benefitted from unprecedented monetary easing in Developed Markets, may experience bouts of sudden outflows in the event of further policy rate increases. Across our portfolios, Oasis' global income exposure thus continues to favour high quality issuers with sustainable cash flows, which is likely to benefit in an environment of volatility, as global monetary conditions normalize over the long term.
