Fund Manager Comments

Global economic growth is expected to rise to 3.4% in 2017 from 3.1% last year, firming further in 2018 to 3.6% on the back of a modest cyclical recovery in global trade volumes and commodity prices. According to the IMF, growth in advanced economies is set to outperform its post-2011 average of 1.7%, expanding around 2.0% this year and next. In the US, an improving job market has supported growth in disposable income and helped underpin consumer spending. Much of the Eurozone is now in a synchronised upswing following a double-dip recession in 2012 caused by the sovereign debt crisis. A key underpin has been the significant 20% weakening in the Euro in the wake of the ECB's decision to launch quantitative easing (QE) in early 2015 which has boosted export competitiveness, especially for Germany. In emerging markets, both Brazil and Russia, in particular, have emerged out of deep recessions. China has continued to defy bearish forecasts by maintaining a GDP growth rate close to 7.0% this year even while it structurally transitions to a more sustainable consumption-led growth path.

The global economy faces a number of key risks. Most importantly, the normalisation of monetary conditions in developed markets, in particular the US, may cause a faster than expected tightening of global financial conditions, which could impact rich market valuations and increase market volatility. This is a particular risk for emerging fixed income markets which have been the main beneficiaries from the 'low for longer' interest rate environment in recent years. China's high level of corporate indebtedness and lack of transparency on local government balance sheets also poses a key risk to the domestic economy and, by extension, the global economy too. More inward looking economic policies could also undermine the benefits of globalization while geopolitical tensions, particularly around North Korea, present a risk to global stability.

Global benchmark yields have remained generally subdued over the past quarter but have more recently picked up following the start of the Federal Reserve's balance sheet normalization process. Fixed income markets remain vulnerable to a disruptive tightening of monetary conditions, although muted inflation in Europe and the US implies central banks will likely withdraw monetary accommodation only gradually. Emerging Markets and High Yield corporate issuers, which have benefitted from unprecedented monetary easing in Developed Markets, may experience bouts of sudden outflows in the event of further policy rate increases. Across our portfolios, Oasis' global income exposure thus continues to favour high quality issuers with sustainable cash flows, which is likely to benefit in an environment of volatility, as global monetary conditions normalize over the long term.
